FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Veterans care home shortlisted for prestigious nursing award

Royal Star & Garter in Solihull has been shortlisted in the Nursing Times Awards, in recognition of the outstanding care it provides.

The Home was announced as one of 12 finalists in the Care of Older People category in the prestigious awards at the end of August.

Care at the Solihull is among the best in the country

It follows a number of accolades for the Tudor Coppice Home, culminating in March when it was rated Outstanding across all five tested areas by the Care Quality Commission, placing it among the best nursing homes in the country.

The Home was also praised in 2018 for its Day Care service by the then Care Minister Caroline Dinenage, and in December 2019 it received recognition in the Markel Third Sector Awards for its exceptional specialist dementia care.

Royal Star & Garter provides loving, compassionate care to veterans and their partners living with disability or dementia.

Home Manager Cheryl Harbourne said: "I'm delighted for the staff that work so hard that we have been shortlisted for the Nursing Times Awards. It recognises the exceptional care provided by the whole team, which everyone plays a part in."

Royal Star & Garter's Director of Care Pauline Shaw added: "I'm delighted that we have been shortlisted for this award. Every member of the team is involved in providing outstanding care and support to our residents, and I am extremely proud that the Home has been recognised in this way."
